

Intelligences Outside of the Normal Curve Survey

Dr. Joseph S. Renzulli
Melissa S. Mitchell

We are interested in finding out which non-cognitive traits you believe are the most important to the success of high potential young people and into which categories these traits fall.

In Part One of this survey you will be presented with a list of non-cognitive characteristics. You will be asked if you believe that these characteristics are significant as possible measures of future success in high potential young people.

In Part Two of this survey you will be presented with a list of non-cognitive characteristics that many high potential young people possess. Please indicate under which category how you feel the characteristic can best be defined. If you believe that the categories given do not suffice, please check the "Other" or "None" choice. If you choose "Other," you will be given an opportunity to describe the category you feel best encompasses the characteristic.

Part One: Non-cognitive Intelligences

In this part of the questionnaire, please indicate whether or not you believe that each of the listed characteristics is an important measure for the future success of high potential young people.

A choice of YES indicates that you believe this trait is an important measure of the future success of high potential young people.

A choice of NO indicates that you do not believe this trait is an important measure of the future success of high potential young people.

Part Two: Non-cognitive Intelligences

You will be presented with a list of non-cognitive characteristics. For each characteristic, please indicate which category you believe it falls under.

Category Definitions:

Mindfulness (Emotional): Characteristics relating to the student's perceptions of his/her or other's feelings.

Ethical/Moral: Characteristics relating to the student's knowledge about right and wrong, good and evil, fair and unfair, etc...

Social: Characteristics relating to the student's interactions between and among others.

Motivational: Characteristics relating to the student's ability to act upon beliefs.

Leadership: Characteristics relating to the student's level of assumption of responsibility and ability to chart a course forward.

If you believe that the characteristic falls under none of the categories provided AND you have a suggestion as to the appropriate designation, please click OTHER and then enter both the characteristic and the new designation in the text box at the bottom of the page.

If you believe that the characteristics falls under none of the categories provided AND you have no suggestions as to an alternative designation, please click NONE.

Please indicate the category that you feel best fits each characteristic given. While we understand that there may be more than one category that the characteristic may fall under, we would like you to choose the ONE category that you believe is the BEST fit for the characteristic.
